

IN THE REALM OF MUSIC

From Bach to Moderns the Course of Sunday Music Wends Its Way.

By Frank H. Warren.

From Bach to Gaillard, aged twenty, ran the long, long trail of yesterday's music. The old music master was the subject of the special ministrations of Alexander Siloti, pianist, Paul Kochanski, violinist, and George Barrere, flutist, who played a Bach program in Aeolian Hall. There were two sonatas for violin and piano, one for piano and flute and another for the three instruments. The industrious Gaillard enthusiastically, Mr. Siloti, had touched on all four compositions and his affection for his musical forefather, whom he considered the greatest of living composers, found outward expression in the ardent pleasure and delight the pianist derived from interpreting him. Mr. Kochanski, too, grasped, felt and breathed in the Bach spirit while Mr. Barrere, the more nimble movement of the flute sonata, was almost a lambkin at play. All the compositions were well played but, even so, comprised a good dose except for the initiated, of whom there were many in the audience, including Paderewski. It was something of an anomaly to see the recipient of so much adulation and applause bestowing it upon others.

Mr. Gaillard, the other age extreme, appeared on the program given by the International Composers' Guild for its first concert in the Klaw Theatre. The Guild's purpose is to advance modern music by interpreting living composers only, and last evening it won out. The program contained works heretofore unheard in America, the audience was modern, and even the stage clock pointed steadily to 11, as though heralding music of the unborn future. A sonata of Arthur Honegger, born 1892, for violin and piano, came and went without disclosing two consecutive notes of melody as we recognize it. It was played by Messrs. Tinot and Salzedo. Next came Rudhyar, a Parisian, dating from 1895, played his own Luciferian Stanzas (1922), and

GANNA WALSKA SAILS FOR U. S. CONCERT TOUR EARLY NEXT MONTH

McCormick Doesn't Worry About What People Say, Career Comes First.

PARIS, Dec. 18 (By Associated Press).—"I am intensely interested in my operatic career, and not in what people say or think about me," said Mrs. Ganna Walska today. She will sail for the United States on the steamship Homeric, Jan. 3, for a two months' concert tour, accompanied by her husband, Harold F. McCormick.

"It will be a chance for some of my American friends to see what a splendid wife I have got," interjected Mr. McCormick. The McCormicks are living at No. 16 Rue Lubeck. They both expressed themselves as being very happy.

Mrs. Ganna Walska said her American concert tour would begin shortly after she landed. She will not sing in New York City, but will give concerts in the immediate neighborhood of the metropolis. Then she will tour southern and central America.

One of the studies being pursued by Ganna Walska is English, which she is beginning to speak fluently. "I am intensely interested in all things in America, the country of my adoption," she said.

MISS BOOTH PAYS HIGH COMPLIMENT TO JOHN WANAMAKER

A tribute to John Wanamaker from Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army was read last night at memorial services for the merchant in Salvation Temple, No. 122 West 14th Street.

The tributes, read by Col. Walter Jenkins, National Secretary, said the world was "miserably poorer," that business had lost "a great prince," the church "a mighty pillar," the Salvation Army "a loyal friend," the "united States" "an honest citizen" and the poor and needy "a benefactor."

Mrs. Booth wrote that the whole world had been enriched "by the glory of the life of John Wanamaker," that he "towered head and shoulders above his fellow men," and that he had "demonstrated a cherished character to mankind."

Col. Jenkins, after reading the tributes, said the life of Mr. Wanamaker was "an example worthy of emulation by young men and old, both in business and private life."

MINISTER IN PULPIT PRAISES THE LIFE OF FRANK BACON, ACTOR

Comparing the pitfalls in the path of a clergyman to the evils and temptations of the Broadway stage, the Rev. Harold Pattison, pastor of the Washington Heights Baptist Church, preached in his church last night a sermon on the temptations to be found in the life of Frank Bacon.

"The very qualities that made Frank Bacon a great actor made him a great man," said the clergyman. "No actor has ever been so greatly beloved by Broadway and by his fellow actors. On the night he left New York to report his arrest in Chicago 100,000 people were around Broadway to say 'goodbye.' When Bacon died the Nation mourned and President Harding sent his message along with that of ex-President Wilson, and for the first time in his life Mr. Bacon was remembered by his sorrow."

Dr. Pattison went on to show how Bacon had always worked hard, always been hopeful, and always a "good man." "He never spoke disparagingly of Broadway," he said. "There is a deal of human nature there, and there is a deal of soul wherever there is human nature. There is religion on Broadway."

"Ravishment" (1915), parts of a larger group of piano pieces. As Luciferian Stanzas go it was the best Luciferian Stanzas we have yet heard. It seemed as though a child might play it—if he could bring his hands down upon bunches of notes hard enough to equal Mr. Rudhyar's tone. Lazare Saminsky, a Russian, with compositions of a larger nature to his credit, played two ineffective songs—nearly sung by Mme. Loblan. Enter Martus Gaillard, twenty, with the first bit of fresh air. Two songs, poems of Verlaine, had real musical substance, form and beauty. Better singing would have helped them.

The real composer of the evening next spoke, Maurice Ravel, whose sonata for violin and cello (1920), interpreted by Messrs. Tinot and Kefer, is the program informed one, a return to a combination cultivated in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, and, structurally, not conceived along traditional lines. The themes are fragmentary as if Ravel were again afraid of writing something that would be obviously pleasing, but it is written by a musician, and Ravel in one movement forgetting himself turned off a lovely bit. There was much humorous musical give and take between the instruments, gayly done by Mr. Tinot and his naughty cello player.

Now, "Thank God, the Americans Come!" Carl Ruggles, born Marion, Mass., 1876, was represented by "Angels" (1920), the second movement from the suite "Men are Angels," for six muted trumpets! The wisest thing we know of to do with six trumpets is to mute them. And if one is to write a piece for them, we don't see but that Mr. Ruggles did as well as any one could. The composition was a series of closely allied notes that didn't suggest "Angels" to us, though it must have to the audience for it was repeated. We should like to place an order with the composer for a piece for six muted saxophones to be dedicated to the six Ruggles Brothers.

The whole program proved a novel experiment and we should have liked to see the performers less nervous and get as much enjoyment from it as their audience apparently did.

Other concerts of the day were: A recital by Emma Calve, soprano, and Jean Gerardy, cellist, in the Hippodrome; the regular "pop" concert at the Century Theatre by the City Symphony Orchestra; The Philadelphia Orchestra's concert at the Metropolitan Opera House, in which that skillful cellist, Hans Kindler, played the Tchaikovsky Variations on a Rococo Theme, and the orchestra, under Mr. Transky, boomed out the Slavic March and colored the Rimsky-Korsakoff Suite "Scheherazade"; and finally the evening concert of the Metropolitan, at which Albert Spalding, American violinist, was visiting soloist.

Of Saturday's events Paderewski's second piano recital should not be overlooked. He was in splendid form and had to command his familiar tone, his color brush, his vigor, his phrasing skill and his deep interpretative powers. His audience showed signs of extreme ecstasy.

Carlos Valdezama, Peruvian composer and pianist, disclosed his composing gift, his works being based upon rhythms and melodies of the Peruvian Incas. Editha Helena, soprano, sang well.

Evelyn Levin, youthful violinist, a pupil of Mr. Auer, at her debut recital seemed to have the necessary technique and other essentials to encourage her in the larger journey into the realm of interpretation that lies ahead.
